Thank you for your interest!
At Boise State, we seek highly motivated nurses who are ready to assume leadership roles in complex clinical environments, health care policy arenas, and health care delivery systems. We are looking for students who are prepared to meet the rigorous academic expectations of a professional doctoral program and individuals who embrace a collaborative and self-directed educational approach.

About the Doctor of Nursing Practice
The Doctor of Nursing Practice (DNP) is the highest degree for nurses working with patients, teaching nursing practice, or leading health related organizations. The DNP prepares nurses to improve nursing practice and patient outcomes, and increases the supply of expert clinical nursing faculty.

At Boise State, the DNP curriculum consists of 40 credits in eight semesters (5-6 credits per semester, including summers) and requires the completion of a Scholarly Project.

Scholarly Project
Doctoral education in nursing practice is distinguished by the completion of a project that synthesizes the student’s work and uses evidence to improve either practice or patient outcomes. A Scholarly Project may involve assessment, evaluation, and/or analysis of data and could be a practice change initiative, a research utilization project, a grant application, or a program evaluation.

Executive Sessions
Each spring, students visit campus for 2-3 day executive sessions. The inaugural session is held during the second semester. Then, in their fourth semester, students present a Scholarly Project proposal and at the final session, during their final (eighth) semester, students present their Scholarly Projects.

Costs
Tuition for the DNP is $30,000 ($750 per credit hour x 40 credits). Additional cost may include books, student fees, software and supplies. Lodging and transportation to and from spring campus sessions are the responsibility of the student.
Application Deadlines
The DNP program begins in August (fall semester) and applications are accepted December 1 through July 1 of each year. Applicants who apply and submit official transcripts by April 1 will be given priority consideration. Applications received after July 1 will be considered if space is available.

Application Requirements

- Boise State's DNP is available to nurses practicing in all states, except Georgia, Louisiana, North Dakota, Tennessee, and West Virginia.

- Admission to Boise State’s Graduate College is required, but admission to the Graduate College does not guarantee admission to the DNP Program. Please direct any questions about the Graduate College application to gradcoll@boisestate.edu or 208-426-3903.
